Caring with Compassion in a Digital World

Concurrent #1

Rebecca Charow

Digital Education and Informatics Research Associate, UHN

David Wiljer

Executive Director - Education, Technology & Innovation, University Health Network

The delivery of care to patients is becoming more inextricably linked to technologies and digital ecosystems. At the same time, health professionals, learners and organizations have not been adequately prepared to cope with these shifts in practice and to provide compassionate care in this evolving landscape. New approaches to activating our patients and preparing our professionals are required, and, at the same time, we need to reconsider the quality and attributes of the technologies that are altering the landscape. This presentation will discuss what it means to provide compassionate care in a digital ecosystem and foster a culture of 'digital ...

Symposia: Helping overwhelmed healthcare organizations deal with COVID communication challenges

Concurrent Session

Anna Silverman

Managing Partner & CEO, Tykans Group

Manna Ng

Director of Business Development, Tykans Group

The COVID pandemic has challenged how health care organizations communicate with patients. With increasing demands from the pandemic, health care professionals now have less time to provide critical care. Alleviating the administrative notifications with a flexible, automated, notification technology helps give health care professionals more time to attend to patients. Speakers: Manna Ng – Director of Business Development, Tykans Anna Silverman – Managing Partner & CEO, Tykans
